The 8 Unmissable Booths at UNTITLED Miami Beach
From paintings to a radio broadcasting pavilion, here's what to see.

Brian Boucher, November 29, 2016

If you want to take advantage of both the beach and the art that’s all over Miami right now, you couldn’t do much better than to visit UNTITLED, which takes place in a tent right on the sand at Ocean Drive and 12th Street.

Here are some of the works and booths you shouldn’t miss this year.

Alois Kronschlaeger and Paul Amenta with Ted Lott, HYBRID STRUCTURE (Miami Folly) (2016).

A pavilion in the aisles will host Untitled, Radio, where various guests will appear and be broadcast on Wynwood Radio. Those using wheelchairs can also participate, since the lower part of the ramp is accessible. Activist Chris Smit, who argues for accessibility as a civil right, is among the participants, so expect some lively and engaging shows on much-discussed issues.
