Cristin Tierney Gallery, New York is hosting an exhibition of the works of American artist Peter Campus (b.1937), titled 'peter campus, circa 1987', on view from January 19 through March 4, 2017.

This black box exhibition of historic photo projections by Peter Campus comprises five black and white images of stones projected onto gallery walls. The exhibited works are a significant departure from the artist's single-channel works and video installations of the 1970s. Closely linked to a previous group of video and photo projections of human heads, the stone works can be interpreted as a product of the artist's growing interest in the natural landscape. The artist is renowned as a seminal figure in the history of video and new media art. Peter Campus is one of the very first artists to pick up a video camera and create art out of it.

The exhibition is on view at Cristin Tierney Gallery, 540 W 28th St, New York, NY 10001, USA.
