The University of Toronto's John H. Daniels Faculty of Architecture, Landscape, and Design has a big day planned later this month, with four different events planned for Friday, March 24th. Kicking off the day from 1PM to 2PM, a lecture titled "The Collaborationists: Exhibitions, Public Art, Integrated Practice" will be presented by artists Jennifer Marman and Daniel Borins—creators of a number of public art installations around Toronto—at the U of T's Koffler House. The lecture will cover the visual artists' projects, including a recent touring art exhibition called "The Collaborationists". The lecture will discuss Marman and Borins' art studio and public practice, as well as insight into the two's longstanding collaboration with one another.
