of familiar markers from office culture, fluorescent lights included. The work is co-presented by Cristin Tierney Gallery.

“We don’t have a proper job, we are told quite often, we don’t go to the office and do important things, we’ve never sent a fax to Chicago,” Wood & Harrison said in a press release. “So maybe that’s why the idea of an office, for us, is special, a bit of a mystery. Maybe that’s why we built an office in our studio. Maybe that’s why one of the art we tried to make is ‘Building Things.’”
